A warning about streets in Arlington:

Streets with the same name start and stop several places in Arlington County. This means that you must know the block number of a street to know if you are on the correct segment of the street or not. The same street name may not be accessible from another part of the same named street elsewhere in the county, sometimes even a few blocks away!

The street system in Arlington County is laid out so that Route 50 (Arlington Blvd.) which runs through the center of the County acts as the North-South dividing line. Streets north of Route 50 have "North" in their name, e.g., N. Glebe Rd.; streets south of Route 50 have "South" in their name, e.g., "S. Glebe Rd."

Succeeding streets are named with their initial letters running alphabetically. Streets closest to the Potomac River on the East have one syllable names, (A-Z), then 2 syllable names (A-Z) then 3 syllable names (A-Z) as your move toward the western edge of the county.
